As I believe your title is asking to find some kind of "This text on this page" based on that text I used the below to find the closest thing to this. // Any text found on this page (//more likely for xhtml pages) var found = false; $('body').filter(function(){ // filter that text we are looking for var txt = $(this).text(); return txt.indexOf(theKeyHere) >= 0; }).each(function(){ // if we found that text then update the found attribute found = true; }); I then used jquery to find it and hide it until the user clicks. // hide all the text $('body').filter(function(){ // filter that text we are looking for var txt = $(this).text(); return txt.indexOf(theKeyHere) >= 0; }).each(function(){ // if we found that text then update the found attribute var found = true; $(this).attr('found', 'found'); }); // then show it on the click $('body').on('click', function(){ if ($(this).attr('found') === 'found') { // let's show it $(this).attr('hidden', 'hidden'); } else { // otherwise let's hide it $(this).attr('hidden', 'visible'); } }); This invention relates to an optical proximity effect correcting apparatus used in the exposure step for a lithographic process in semiconductor manufacturing processes, etc. Referring to a conventional proximity effect correcting apparatus of an optical proximity effect correcting type, a pattern image on a reticle (mask) is projected on a wafer by a reduction projection optical system. Reflection of the projection light from the wafer is detected, and the pattern image on the ret e79caf774b

It's a grassy, rickety track just north of Fort Hood — greener than any place on the base, where military vehicles prowl around oversized plowed fields, and camouflage-painted Humvees jostle for position in the neatly ordered parking lots. The biochemistry students and professors who teach there once believed that Argi R held a single, shining secret: a substance that could help them build better medicines. The Texas Army National Guard laboratory owned by the 24th Combat Aviation Brigade failed to produce

What I recommend is to use windows built in tool repair, then use dta-decode to recover any files you need. no idea if you already did it, but if youre planning on flash cwm, may I recommend you also backup your personal settings file, "~/.android/config"? Also maybe you could check your dtb-installation and the dtb-size (in /system) with the following command in adb shell: android_connect# adb shell ls /system/lib/libroam-0.9.d/ | wc -l android_connect# adb shell ls /system/lib/libroam-0.9.d/ | wc -l Also if you want to start cwm from within ROM on boot, even if it works, you might want to try specifying "cwm --force" as kernel command line parameter instead of starting cwm manually from shell. i downloaded and installed this but i dont know what to do from here.... extract to sdcard and start it from the home screen of pc! note: in case you didnt install cwm6 on pc, you will have to go into terminal and type /system/bin/cwm (i dont know why) and you will need to drag sdcard over to pc and also back to the sdcard after you run cwm maybe this can help you fix your problems: this is a simple xda thread that might help have fun hacking! ps: cwm is not fully supported by uBoot so it wont survive a reboot!
